

Booker T. Washington

<http://gardenofpraise.com/ibdbookr.htm>

Booker T. Washington was born	taught agricultural science at the Institute.
One of his duties as a boy	to go to school half a day.
After he was freed, Booker and his brother	which is public speaking.
His parents allowed him	worked in the salt and coal mines.
He took the name Washington because	that was his step-father's first name.
Booker's middle name	a slave in Virginia.
At Hampton Institute Booker worked as	he later returned to teach there.
His teacher gave lessons in elocution	the Tuskegee Institute.
After finishing at Hampton	was Taliaferro.
He bought land and started	was to carry sacks of corn to the mill.
Later Harvard University	assistant janitor to pay for his room and board.
George Washington Carver	gave him an honorary degree.